Information Literacy

The ability to express, connect with and understand communication in numerous formats; to locate, evaluate, and use effectively and ethically resources of information; to distinguish between credible and non-credible sources; to recognize when information is needed to further oneself, an objective or a project.

As part of McCord Memorial Library's continued mission to earn a silver star in information literacy, we have developed a program that can be done both at home and online.

Pick up a cybersafety and information literacy packet when you pick up your books.

Online resources are also available
